Meet the Author Eleni Pavlides

Subject(s)
Language & Literature

Eleni Pavlides received her PhD from the University of Western Australia in 2011. Currently she works as a University Associate with the School of Social Sciences at the University of Tasmania. She is a playwright, performer and literary critic who enjoys book reviewing and who has published in Australian Studies with the aim of furthering cross cultural understanding. Eleni explains her reasons for choosing Cambridge Scholars Publishing.

“As this was my first foray into academic publishing, I sought the advice of colleagues. Cambridge Scholars surpassed my colleagues’ recommendations. Consequently, my first academic publishing experience was richly rewarding. In every instance of my dealings with them Cambridge Scholars “walked the talk” – they delivered what they said they would, when they said they would. I never felt as if I was an early career researcher as every query and request for help was treated supportively and respectfully. Expertise and guidance was always at hand. From manuscript to final publication my book was produced in an impressively short turnaround time and the publishing quality was impressive. I could not have asked for more from my editor. In the light of others experience, I am so grateful that my colleagues encouraged me to publish with Cambridge Scholars. Thank you to everyone who worked with me!”

“In my dozens of publishing experiences over the past 16 years, working with Cambridge Scholars has been unique, productive and enjoyable. Thanks to Cambridge Scholars’ wide distribution list, my book has reached major libraries in the world. Cambridge Scholars editors and staff are professional, flexible and understandable. Those who work in the academia often face conflicting deadlines—teaching, writing, conferences, and administrative tasks; and we do expect extra time to finish our writings. Whenever I needed justifiable extension, our Cambridge Scholars colleagues were ready to cooperate. This book contributed has been cited and reviewed by a considerable number of scholars across the globe. I was invited to give talks about the book in India, Palestine/Israel, France, UK, USA, Canada. Now there is almost no conference on Palestine/Israel in most parts of the world to which I am not invited, mainly as a result of publishing this work. For these reasons, I have agreed with a co-editor from University of California, Berkeley, to submit another book titled “Global Legal Education Approaches: Special Reference to the Middle East” for publication by Cambridge Scholars, 2015.”
