

Citizenship and Democracy: The Modern State in Transition, and What Next?

Collection Editor: Arup Baisya

Description

The relation between the citizens of a nation and the institutions of the state determines the character of a state. The state conceptualizes the premise of citizenship. Every civilization bears the two dialectically intertwined progressive and reactionary trends of the past in its present. How the past manifests itself in the present depends upon the really existing social balance of forces. The global discourse is agog with divergent views on the question of citizenship and migration. It is imperative on the academic intellectual circle to delve into this subject and draw a forward-looking conceptual framework. This book may be a guide to the people who are engaged in serious debate and struggle thereon to reach to a correct conclusion.

About the Editor

Arup Baisya is a writer and a social activist, with professional experience in the fields of technology and management. He is the author of a book published by Cambridge Scholar Publishing. His research explores diverse socio-economic phenomena, and he has published extensively on several socio-economic and political issues in various national and international journals.

Submission Requirements

All chapters submitted should conform to the grammar and formatting guidelines provided by Cambridge Scholars Publishing, which can be viewed here: <https://www.cambridgescholars.com/pages/forms-guidelines>;

Unless agreed with the Editor prior to submission, referencing should be in Chicago;

Any work submitted for publication should be free of copyright restrictions and a statement should be submitted in support of this;

Contributions should be scholarly rather than anecdotal or unverifiable;

Contributions must be wholly in English, excluding footnotes, appendices and short extracts for translation;

While we will perform pre-press evaluations on the collection, we do not provide full proofreading services, so we ask that works are submitted to us in their final, 'ready-to-go' form.

You can view open projects at the link below:

<https://www.cambridgescholars.com/pages/guest-edited-collections>

