

Languages of Politics

Collection Editor: Dragana Bozic Lenard

Description

Depending on their gender, education, party or other affiliations, politicians tend to develop their “tribal language” whose usage in the political arena serves to increase polarization and create ideologically homogenous neighbourhoods instead of democratically exchange arguments. What are the characteristics of different languages spoken by politicians, how to they coin partisan neologism and what are the effects of their language polarization are the issues to be addressed.

About the Editor

Dragana Božić Lenard obtained her PhD in Linguistics and MA in the English and Croatian language and literature from the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences in Osijek, University of Osijek, Croatia. She works as an assistant professor at the Faculty of Electrical Engineering, Computer Science and Information Technology Osijek, University of Osijek, Croatia, where she teaches English for Specific Purposes courses. Her research interests include ESP, sociolinguistics and computational linguistics. She is a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Teaching English for Specific and Academic Purposes, advisory board for the Cambridge Scholars Publishing, scientific committee for the International English for Specific Purposes Teachers' Association and a lead editor and strand coordinator for ERL Journal, to name a few.

Submission Requirements

All chapters submitted should conform to the grammar and formatting guidelines provided by Cambridge Scholars Publishing, which can be viewed here: <https://www.cambridgescholars.com/pages/forms-guidelines>;

Unless agreed with the Editor prior to submission, referencing should be in Chicago;

Any work submitted for publication should be free of copyright restrictions and a statement should be submitted in support of this;

Contributions should be scholarly rather than anecdotal or unverifiable;

Contributions must be wholly in English, excluding footnotes, appendices and short extracts for translation;

While we will perform pre-press evaluations on the collection, we do not provide full proofreading services, so we ask that works are submitted to us in their final, ‘ready-to-go’ form.

You can view open projects at the link below:

<https://www.cambridgescholars.com/pages/guest-edited-collections>

